Gould, two students face civil suit in December fire

By JENNIFER SULLIVAN and MICHAEL DANIELS

The owners of two Main Street buildings damaged in a spectacular fire last December have filed suit against two Gould Academy students, accusing them of committing arson when they discarded cigarettes in an alley.

Mother's Restaurant owner Susan S. O'Donnell and landlord Yvonne Bastianelli of White Horse Beach, Mass., have named the school as a defendant in the case, along with two students, according to documents filed in Oxford County Superior Court.

The suit seeks damages against the students for five counts, including common law arson, trespass, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and civil conspiracy.

Damages are also being sought against Gould Academy on two charges, vicarious liability for the actions of the students and negligence.

The suit also seeks punitive damages against all three parties.

The suit charges that Gould Academy is "vicariously liable" for the behavior of the students, whose conduct was "so extreme and outrageous that it exceeds all possible bounds of decency and must be regarded as atrocious and utterly intolerable in a civilized society."

The suit further charges that the two female students, who were never charged criminally in connection with the fire, started the blaze "intentionally or negligently" near Bastianelli's building.

Portland lawyer Richard L. Suter, is representing St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. in a subrogation claim, as well as the women individually, in seeking damages for their uninsured losses.

Suter said, "We intend to show through a preponderance of the evidence that these girls were involved either negligently or intentionally."

Bethel planners rule

Brew pub stage must come down

But selectmen note that outdoor concerts may go on

By WENDY HANSCOM

Bethel planners have ordered the Sunday River Brewing Company to tear down its concert stage.

The Bethel Planning Board voted last Wednesday night to give the restaurant owners 31 days to tear down the structure.

Developer Heinie Merrill said later there are no plans to appeal the Planning Board decision.

The Route 2 restaurant had applied for an after-the-fact permit for the stage. But at a public hearing last month, brewery neighbors complained that the music from two recent concerts was too loud.

"All of us have given this a lot of thought," board chairman Frank Vogt said Wednesday. "I find it difficult to separate the structure from the effect of the structure."

Neighbors worried over the noise also influenced board member Francis Dumont's vote, he told brewery owners last week.

"It echoes everywhere out there," Dumont told Merrill and restaurant managers Hans Trupp and Grant Wilson. "People who live up here enjoy the peace and quiet. I understand that you want to build business, but you have to make people comfortable in their own private homes."

Planner Don Feeney said brewery employees made no attempt to keep the noise down following complaints about the first concert.

"After (the brewery) had been warned that this was a concern following the first concert, there was still a problem with the second concert," Feeney said. "At the public hearing there was strong opposition from the abutters."

The board voted unanimously to deny the brewery an after-the-fact permit and gave the owners 31 days to tear the stage down.

Mayville Tavern will reopen as 'Monk's Inn'

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The former Mayville Tavern on routes 2/26 is scheduled to be reopened by December with a new management and new name.

Bob Scott, owner of the Bethel Bed and Breakfast on Cross Street, said he has taken a long-term lease on the property and plans to reopen the restaurant as The Monk's Inn.

Scott said the restaurant will feature provincial French and Swiss cuisine, and the atmosphere will be "candlelit country restaurant," along the lines of an old French Abby.

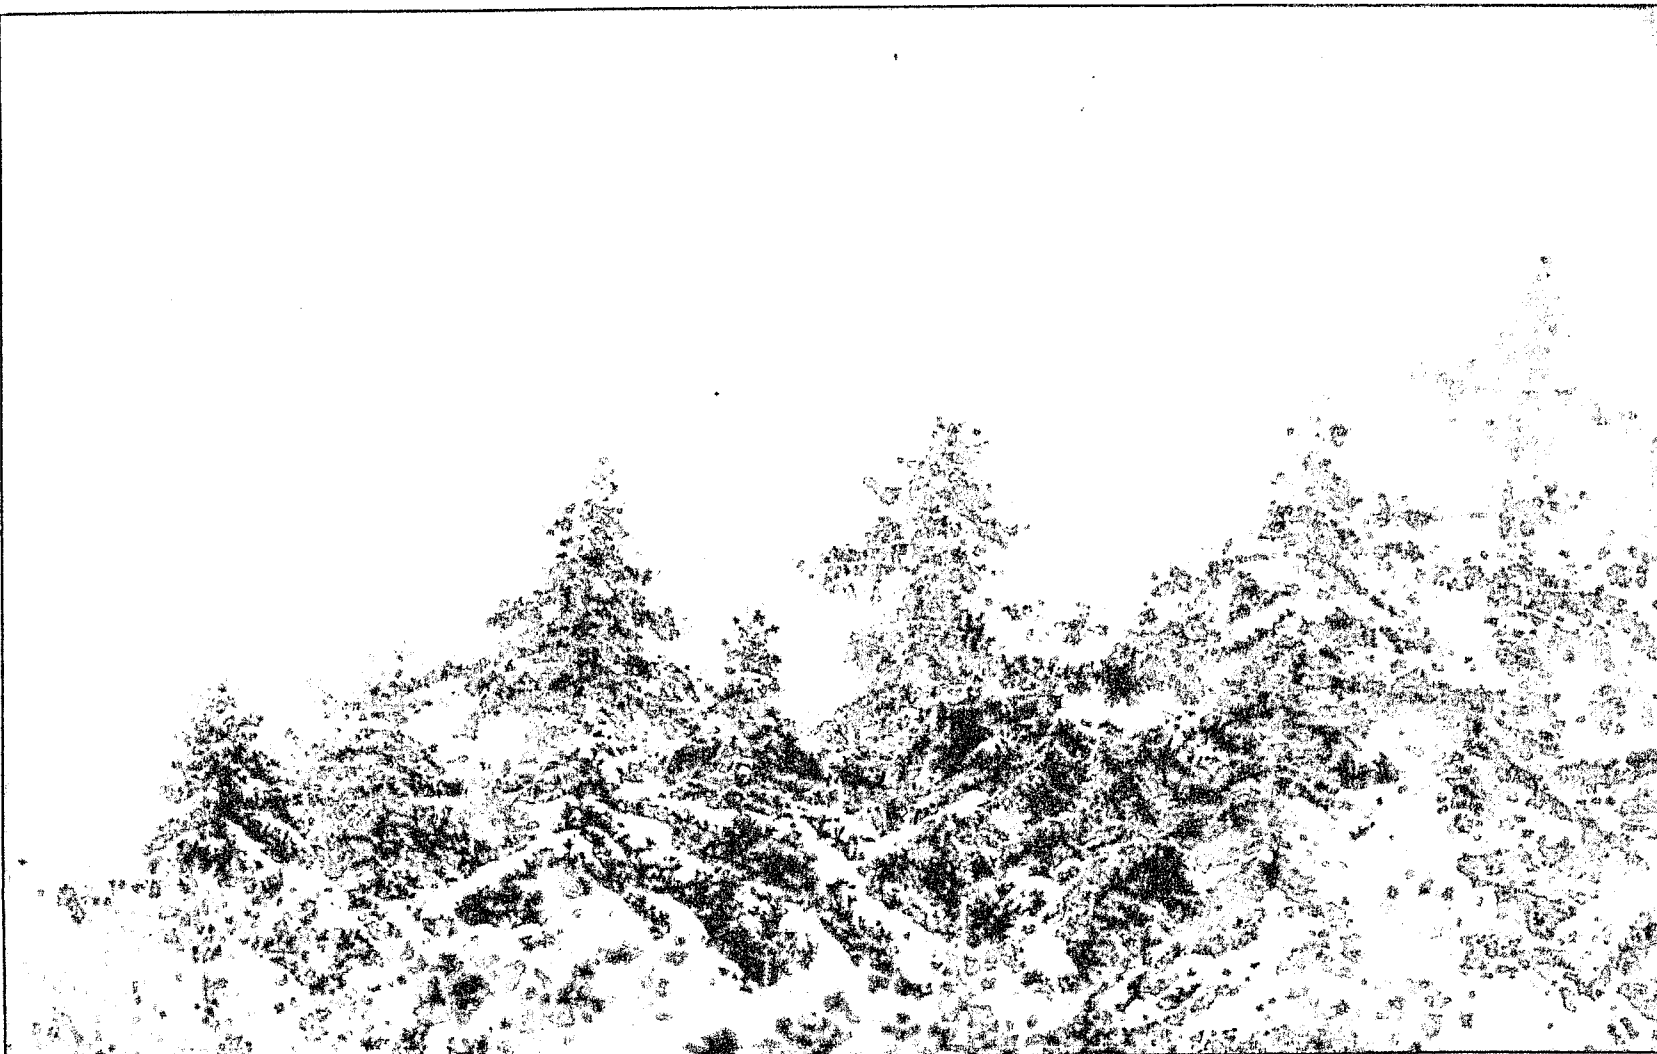

The restaurant will be managed by Scott and a team that has worked with him in setting up a number of other restaurant projects, he said.

The Mayville Tavern closed this spring after little more than a year in operation. The partners who formed the Mayville, most of them ski patrollers at Sunday River, sustained more than $160,000 in losses, for which they blamed former manager John Flynn.

Flynn was arrested in August on federal probation violation charges stemming from his activities at the Mayville, and his involvement in a number of other business deals gone bad.

As of Monday, Flynn was still being held in a New Hampshire jail pending a hearing on those charges.

Scott said the new management at the restaurant has no connection with the former partners.

NOVEMBER COMES IN LIKE A LION--An early season snowfall blanketed the area Monday, sending some drivers into the ditch, but delighting skiers. Half a foot of snow fell in Upton, and icy roads were reported in other parts of the county. A number of minor accidents were reported but no serious injuries. And on Tuesday Sunday River announced that it was now making snow "top-to-bottom."

Miss Sue plans new studio

Half a century of dancing and she's still on her toes

By WENDY HANSCOM

"The life of a dance teacher is not glamorous. It's taking care of furnaces, scrubbing floors, shoveling snow, lugging and toting," says Sue Clement Farrar.

But while "Miss Sue" may not see the glamour in holding dance classes sweaty from clearing snow from the walk or covered with ashes from a quick furnace fix up, she has bestowed a touch of glamour on hundreds of Bethel area children.

Every year since 1957, young students in satiny sequined costumes with bright makeup have had a moment in the spotlight while they danced in front of adoring friends and family.

Miss Sue's annual Children's Dance Theater productions turn young people, music and movement into a story in dance.

But it's not easy. "I think people think you go in and tippy-toe around and that's it," she said. "It's not. It's hard work."

Miss Sue's 50-plus years as a dance teacher have been marked by hard work and tragedy.

She started taking dancing lessons as a child and held her first dance recital in 1935 in Mexico.

"In 1935 dance was not what it is today," Farrar said. "Today it's very technical. It's all graded and you have to know what to do for each grade. Back then if you knew a little dance, you taught."

Farrar continued to teach in Mexico until 1941, the year of the Rumbon/Mexico "Dawn Disaster," when a group of picnickers set sail near Harpswell one summer Sunday with tragic results.

"Twenty-eight of my closest friends went on a cruise on a Sunday and they all drowned," Farrar said. "They called it the Dawn Disaster. I didn't go with them and I had quite a bit of guilt over that. The whole town was dressed in black. I closed my studio down, locked it up forever, and went to New York (City) to live."

Living in NYC for seven years only fueled Farrar's love of dance. Her Manhattan apartment building was home to dancers, Broadway actors and fashion models.

"It was when I was living in New York City with three girls that I started to seriously study dance," Farrar said. "I was able to go to the best studios. We went wherever there was a teacher. This is where I got my love for dance enhanced. It was during the war years and the whole atmosphere was 'let's have fun while we can.'"

Farrar's life in Manhattan ended when she married and moved to Phoenix, Ariz., where she taught dance for 12 years before coming to Bethel in 1957.

Almost immediately, she began looking for a place to set up classes. She bought a former mill building

Airport to be off limits to walkers

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Bethel Board of Selectmen has instructed Town Manager Madeleine Henley to post the runway at the Col. Dyke Airport off-limits to pedestrians.

The decision was prompted by concerns about liability at the town-owned airport.

The runway is popular with townspeople exercising themselves and their pets, but, Henley said, local pilots have expressed worries about the possibility of airplane/pedestrian accidents.

The selectmen concurred. "When you're landing a plane at over 100 miles an hour, you don't expect to find someone underneath you walking a poodle," said Selectman John Thurston.

The board instructed Henley to post "something stronger" than just a sign warning that pedestrians using the runway did so at their own risk--as she had originally suggested.

"Something stronger," Henley said later, will probably be total posting of the runway against pedestrian use.

She said, however, that if organized groups wanted to use the runway on a regular basis she would arrange for it to be closed to airplane traffic during those periods.

Cross St. committee winding up its work

Expected to report to selectmen Nov. 15

By DUANE HAYES

Three reports supporting the development of a $25 million passenger rail station and commercial/retail center between Routes 26 and 2 were delivered to the Cross Street Advisory Committee last week, as the nine-member panel continues its impact study on the proposal.

The project, which Victoria Station Corp. partners Heinie Merrill, Leslie Otten and Grant Wilson hope to make a reality, is showing signs of progress.

The plan includes a train station to accommodate potential Amtrak passengers from Montreal, Portland and Boston, and skiers to Otten's nearby Sunday River Ski Resort.

The development would also have a museum, motel, shops and retail spaces, according to Merrill. The architecture would be consistent with Bethel's New England colonial frame buildings, he said, and its village appearance with a common, courtyards, walkways and small parking areas.

Townspeople interested in one report, committee member William Clough, headmaster of Gould Academy stated there seems to be considerable interest in the project by townspeople.

"My overall feeling is that people are interested, willing to dig into it, and want a piece of it," Clough said.

He did, however, explain that getting definite answers from a large number of people has been quite difficult so far.

After sending out letters to residents, he received 25 back, with more positive responses than negative. Some of the positive opinions were that:

- Recreation would play a key role in Bethel's growth.
- Rail service could be a boon.
- Organizations would gain meeting space.

- The U.S. Forest Service is interested from a nature and environment standpoint.
- The site is presently unattractive and would be greatly improved by the plan.

- Pedestrian travel could be enhanced.
- "I see historically minded people showing great interest, and in general all organizations that have themes not connected with commercial businesses looking at the plan as a good opportunity for the community," said Clough.

Some people, however, see the project as having a negative effect on Main Street businesses, he said, because some owners may feel they need to move to the new retail space in order to compete.

Some think the project could limit access to the uptown area, Clough said, and may spawn other developments that are not on town-owned land and lack the control the town has over the Victoria Station Corporation's plan.

Others were doubtful that passenger rail service will become economically viable, Clough said.

Broader tax base

The second report by Town Clerk Merton Brown concerned taxes, services and tax increment funding.

Brown said that estimates on future tax revenue from the project would be: $119,100.00 in 1995, $275,825.00 in 1996, $462,275.00 in 1997, and by 1998, $488,962.00 if the tax rate freezes at 14.75 mills.

WUERZBURGER PERSPECTIVE

To the Editor:

First of all, I would like to thank you for my subscription to The Bethel Citizen while I'm stationed in Wuerzburg, Germany.

I would like to make a suggestion on the paper. I have noticed that the paper has a lot of advertising. I do understand that this is a small paper, unlike your counterpart, The Lewiston Daily Sun, could it be possible to add to your newspaper articles like, Dear Abby, some comics (either local or national), horoscopes (either one for the day or weekly)? Maybe a little more sports. I did notice that you have articles from towns like West Paris and East Stoneham, why isn't there any sports-related articles from these towns/school districts?

In reading your Sept. 22 paper, I would like to agree with Jennifer Stowell. If you print articles like she was talking about, let's leave the names of the accused out of the paper until they are proved to be innocent or guilty.

In closing, I would like to let you know that you are doing a great job, keep it up! If anyone would like to write to me, please address your letters to the address below.

Gould negligence charged

Suter described the "vicarious liability" charge against Gould Academy as "similar to suing an employer for the actions of an employee."

The negligence charge, he said, claims the school's no-smoking policy is unreasonable and forces students to smoke in out-of-the-way places off campus.

Gould Academy does not permit students to smoke either on or off campus.

The school also failed in its duty to properly supervise the students, Suter said, to educate them about smoking and trespass, and to properly supervise them.

Suter said he thought it likely that the owners or insurer of the second building damaged in the fire, the Kennett Realty office and apartment building, would either file their own suit against Gould or join the O'Donnell-Bastianelli suit.

Ed Kennett said this week that there was a possibility his insurer would join the suit.

Kennett said that prior to the fire, he and other neighbors had called the Bethel Police "many times" regarding students smoking in the alley between the buildings.

"A week before the fire we joked in the office that if something wasn't done about it, we wouldn't have any place to come in to work," he said.

Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman said the police had responded to the calls but the problem continued. "We kept chasing them out of there as usual," he said. Bellman said he did not recall if he had talked to anyone at Gould about the problem.

(The problem apparently continues. The Bethel Police log this week reports Gould students smoking near the former Ethel Bisbee School.)

In a prepared statement, Mary Jo Kennett was harshly critical of the school's handling of the matter: "We think that it's sad that (Gould headmaster William) Clough chose to handle the situation as he did. Living in a small town, it is vital to work together in a crisis rather than have one faction set up impermeable walls. Until one is victim to a fire, one cannot fathom its devastating impact. I wonder how Mr. Clough would feel should the situations be reversed. Additionally, I wonder if Mr. Clough realizes what kind of a message his position gave to the youth in his charge and to the youth in this town."

Last December, Clough called the fire "really unfortunate" and said the school was conducting its own investigation.

This week he refused to comment on law suit, citing the advice of the school's attorneys.

The standard of proof in civil cases is not as stringent as in criminal cases, where guilt must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Civil conspiracy charged

The suit charges that the youths acted negligently and committed civil conspiracy by acting "in combination with each other and perhaps others."

Suter acknowledged that he is not certain whether more youths may have been involved.

"Some accounts indicate that there were more than two kids over there," he said. "The first part of this case is going to be the discovery process, so we'll find out more."

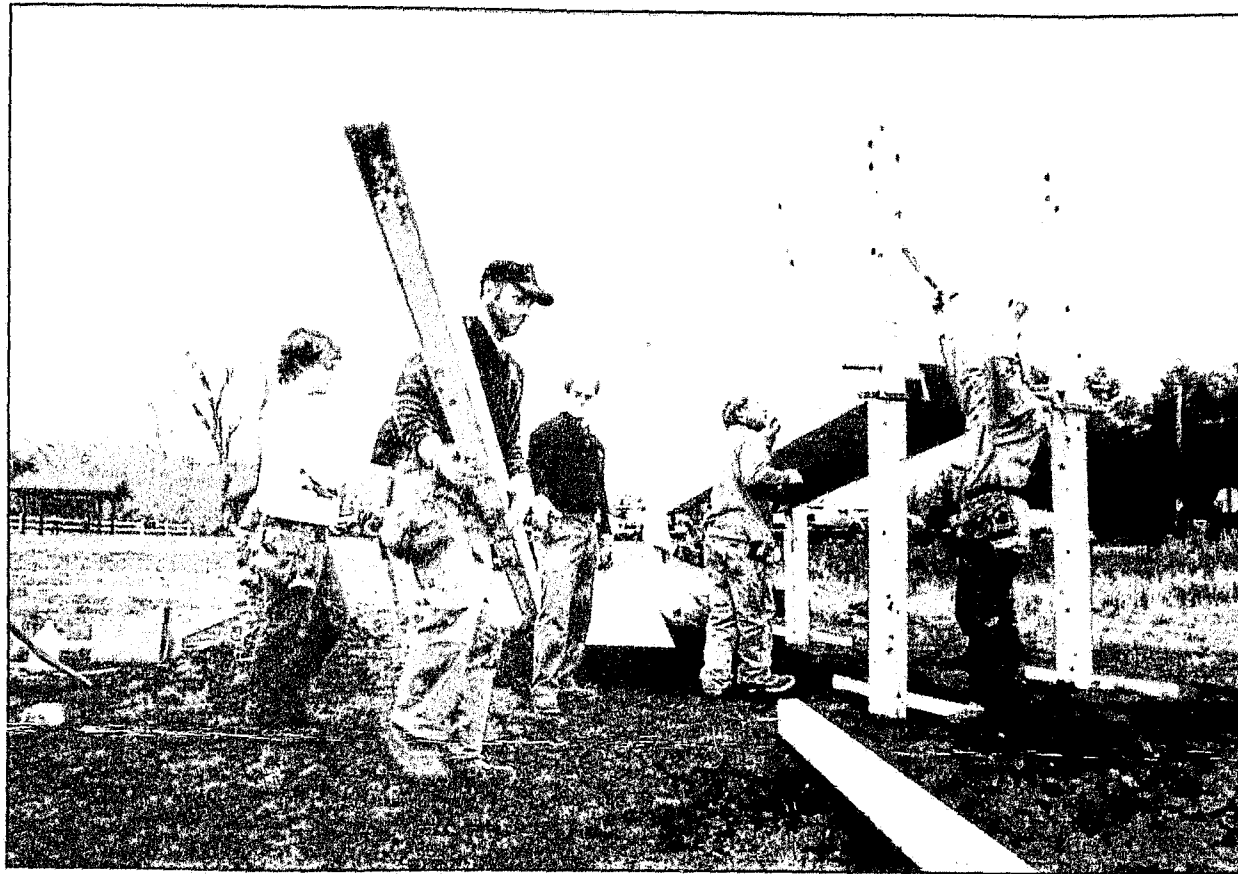

The late-night fire occurred on Dec. 15, just as Gould Academy students were headed home for Christmas break. The blaze, which destroyed two buildings on Main Street, left six people homeless and displaced four businesses. No one was injured.

Investigator Robert Long of the State Fire Marshal's Office said last year that it was "not a secret in the village" that the alley between the buildings owned by O'Donnell and Bastianelli was "a favorite spot to smoke."

"There's no reason to believe right now that the fire was maliciously set," Long said at the time. "If Gould Academy students were involved, they're not likely to come forward because that may mean expulsion for smoking."

The complaint filed against the two students alleges that they "maliciously and willfully" burned the plaintiffs' property, causing severe property damage, economic loss and emotional distress.

The youths are also accused of intentionally inflicting emotional distress upon O'Donnell and Bastianelli that was "so severe that no person reasonably could be expected to endure it."

ment permit, which included approval for outside events, but that approval was contingent upon Planning Board approval of the stage.

However, the Planning Board's rejection of the stage does not necessarily mean the end of outside concerts at the site. Once the stage is torn down, the restaurant will again be in compliance with town ordinances, and the selectmen will be legally required to grant approval for both inside and outside entertainment.

"They can come in again and we'll have to grant it," Selectman Norm Putnam said Monday evening.

Subdivision ap. withdrawn

Also on Wednesday, developer Carl Hansen withdrew his application for a permit to develop Egypt Mountain subdivision on Goss Pond, along the East Bethel Road.

Hansen's plan called for creating four two-acre lots on the south shore of the pond and a road to them.

The subdivision plan also included two lots he has already sold on the north side of the pond.

But Hansen's plan ran into trouble when planners asked questions about the existing driveway to the lots on the pond's north side, which is not up to town road standards.

Hansen asked the board to give the project conditional approval so he could sell a lot on the south shore. He said he would agree to make improvements to the driveway on the north shore side "during a reasonable time period," and possibly post a performance bond.

Feeney said the town's ordinances did not give the board power to "waive anything in terms of road standards."

The board also told Hansen that he would probably be required to put in a dry hydrant.

Hansen said other subdivisions without a nearby pond would not be required to go to the expense of putting in a dry hydrant.

"Just because I have a pond, why should I pay the price," Hansen asked.

The board told Hansen that it was within the fire chief's authority to ask for the hydrant.

A few minutes later, Hansen said he was withdrawing his application and left the meeting.

Miss Sue's studio approved

Sue Clement Farrar was granted approval last week to construct a 28-by-40-foot dance studio adjacent to her Spring Street home. (See related story.)

Farrar agreed to provide audio and visual screening if her neighbors lodged any complaints about the studio in the future.

Comprehensive plan deadline

The board voted to give townspeople until Nov. 10 to come forward and volunteer for the town's Comprehensive Planning Committee.

The board decided the committee should be made up of 15 members, with a minimum of 12 members.

Chairman Vogt said the board has nine applications so far. If enough people don't volunteer, the project may be abandoned for a year or more, Vogt said.

Greenwood recently abandoned its own comprehensive plan effort due to a lack of volunteers with sufficient time for the project.

and the assessment rate of $85 per square foot holds.

"I expect that the tax rate is going to stay as is, but the assessment rate is probably a conservative figure, but I feel I'm quite close to what it will be," he said.

Brown also mentioned there would be some changes in services. There would probably be a need for an additional police officer at $25,000 per year, an in depth needs assessment done of a master plan for town fire service at a cost of $1,500, and a $14,000 increase in solid waste disposal based on the tonnage generated in towns of similar size.

In his research into tax increment financing, Brown said he has talked with Lee Feldman, assistant city planner in Auburn, who thought the project was a perfect candidate for the program.

Brown recommended that the Board of Selectmen become knowledgeable about such financing and consider it carefully as a possibility. "Many people believe such plans to be all on the side of the developer but, according to Feldman, that isn't true. It actually benefits the town in every aspect," said Brown.

Roads report

The third report on roads was given by Arlan Jodrey. Jodrey said $530,000 has already been appropriated by the Maine Department of Transportation for reconstructing Cross Street and can be tied to the project for the relocation of the street.

The plan would have access to the development from Davis Park on Route 26 to Route 2 near the China Gem Restaurant, he said, making a better and safer entrance/exit to the two highways.

Report Nov. 15

The committee was due to meet again last night (Tuesday) and to make its report to the town selectmen at their regular meeting Nov. 15.

Woe Be Us

By MIKE BROWN

The flock of Maine gubernatorial candidates have given no clue, except the expected political bull rhetoric, of course, on how they would lead Maine through the closing 20th Century.

Joe Brennan, Summer Lipman, et al. pomp their circumstances as their earned time and place in history. It's doubtful that many pages of Maine archives should be reserved for the outcome.

The nation, the Northeast and Maine as the outermost house on recession rim are all mired in economic quicksand. President Bill Clinton's remedy is wiggle socialism—the more the squirm the more the tax sand sucks.

Maine Gov. John R. McKernan, Jr. couldn't map a road out of the state economic doldrums except to pontificate about not raising taxes and then agreeing with the Democrat-controlled legislature to do it. McKernan was like the elated football player who picked up an opposing team's fumble and then ran the wrong way for a touchdown while the bleacher tax seat patrons screamed "Wrong way Jock!" But the game McKernan played was rigged even before he donned his govt. No state chief executive escaped the nation's economic plunge.

One rather simple explanation of the Maine economy is that each man, woman, and child citizen represents a $2,607 debt chit to support the state's current biennial budget of $3.2 billion. (And, of course, about $25,000 each for the federal budget.) With the meltdown of the nation's defense budget, Maine will suffer immensely and disproportionately. In the late 1980s, the federal military expenditure in Maine was 1.95 percent of gross state product, which exceeded the total for agricultural services, forestry and fisheries.

Now comes the closing of Loring Air Base, the imminent demise of Kittery shipyard's 8,100-employee wages, the inevitability of Brunswick's naval aviation Soviet sub-hunting squadron to consolidate to warmer political climes, Bath Iron Works' announcement to halve its 7,700-employee payroll and the skeletonizing of Maine's National Guard.

How will Maine's prospective governors offset these expected economic disasters added to 40,000 private business jobs lost in the past four years? With rhetoric?

Maine also has some immovable liabilities like geography and weather. Our end-of-the-line geographic status means we have to try harder. But the state has no mass transportation entry or egress for larger scale economic trade except public waters which the corporate environmentalists have expropriated for their own selfish money/membership raising purposes. (Read: Sears Island cargo port 10-year bondage history.)

Maine's dominant weather would drive even Mark Twain bananas. But its vagaries really affect major crops like potatoes and blueberries. And imported feed costs coupled with local land taxes have reduced Maine farms and their 114,000 cattle to endangered species categories.

Maine's marine fisheries have essentially been nationalized by the federal government, which tells state fishermen what/when catching gear is legal to comply with all-species, every-changing harvest quotas mandated by Washington not Augusta. State sovereignty does not exist in the Maine commercial fishing industry.

Maine is a beautiful state, as 1.2 million diverse residents realize. But it cannot be politically hybridized. The reality of Maine is a state which over-spends its income and lives on illusion—like the kiting check writer.

We should allocate our finite tax resources on realism and existing assets and discard expensive forays into political experimentation behind the looking glass.

Perhaps one of the gubernatorial flock will agree. (Veteran newsman and columnist Mike Brown writes regularly on the Augusta political scene. His views are his own and do not necessarily reflect those of The Citizen.)

"I took it over as a studio and everything I owned for dance and the night before I was to teach I was burned out," she said.

Farrar continued to teach, but forced to move around a lot taught in Odeon Hall, the Chas House on Main Street, at the Academy and a few other places.

"I even taught in one of the at the Saunders Mill (P. Hanover Dowel)," she said. "Younger students were very tired to go down the slide that pushed the logs down on, so to watch them very carefully."

From dancer to author

In 1978, Farrar went into retirement. Her daughter, Mi Keyes took over the studio, but Farrar still taught advanced classes.

But even when she was retired, Farrar didn't slow down. She started a writing career.

Her first book "Samantha Stage" was published by Books in 1980. The book was picked up by the child Scholastic Book Club. Farrar went on to publish "Emily and Cavalier."

She also has two more books at the publishers. A Samantuel entitled "Bravo Samantuel" and "Clowns in the Kitchen, in the Hall."

"Clowns" is based loosely on Farrar's own experiences in the "It's about a year in the life of an eccentric dance teacher and her kids trying to put on a recital at Odeon Hall," she said.

near the railroad tracks and set up shop.

"I took it over as a studio and put everything I owned for dance into it and the night before I was to start to teach I was burned out," she said.

Farrar continued to teach, but was forced to move around a lot. She taught in Odeon Hall, the Chapman House on Main Street, at Gould Academy and a few other places.

"I even taught in one of the rooms at the Saunders Mill (former Hanover Dowel)," she said. "My younger students were very tempted to go down the slide that they pushed the logs down on, so I had to watch them very carefully."

From dancer to author

In 1978, Farrar went into semi-retirement. Her daughter Michelle Keyes took over the studio, but Farrar still taught advanced classes.

But even when she was semi-retired, Farrar didn't slow down. Instead she started a writing career.

Her first book "Samantha on Stage" was published by Dial Books in 1980. The book was also picked up by the children's Scholastic Book Club. Farrar has gone on to publish "Emily and Her Cavalier."

She also has two more books now at the publishers. A Samantha sequel entitled "Bravo Samantha," and "Clowns in the Kitchen, Tutus in the Hall."

"Clowns" is based loosely on Farrar's own experiences in Bethel. "It's about a year in the life of an eccentric dance teacher and her four kids trying to put on a recital in Odeon Hall," she said.

Back to teaching

When Farrar's daughter moved from Bethel in 1980, Miss Sue took up teaching again full time.

For a period in the 1970s and again in recent years, Farrar taught in the Main Street building that most recently housed the Hometown Bakery and the Children's Dance Theater.

But last December, that building, now owned by Yvonne Bastionelli, and the Kennett building next door were destroyed by fire.

"The fire was difficult," Farrar said, "but I survived it with the help of all my friends."

With a history of meeting challenges, Farrar vowed shortly after the Dec. 15, 1993 fire that she would be teaching again within a month and she was. She taught the rest of the season at the American Legion Hall in Bethel and her production of "Music Man" went off on schedule in the spring.

Farrar began classes this fall on the second story of the Lions Hall on Main Street. But when it started to get cold she learned the room was unheated. She moved downstairs, but quarters were cramped and the room has two posts in the middle of it, she said.

So now Farrar has decided to move her studio closer to home.

Last week she received approval from the Bethel Planning Board to build a 28-by-40-foot studio behind her Spring Street house. It will include a waiting room, dressing room and studio.

Construction crews are supposed to break ground this week, and Miss Sue wants to be in the new studio by Christmas.

"It's a frightening step to take," Farrar said, "But I'm an optimist. It will work out."

After all her years in Bethel, Farrar said she has a lot of friends who are planning to help her out.

Once the foundation is set on the new Children's Dance Theater, Farrar is going to have a studio-raising. Construction volunteers have already lined up and more are welcome, Farrar said.

"It's going to be a lot of work," Farrar said. "I'm not doing it for myself, but for the children. The people in this town have been good to me."

Four admit to trashing Gould field hockey cage

By WENDY HANSCOM

Four Bethel men have admitted to destroying a field hockey cage last week at Gould Academy, resulting in approximately $1,500 worth of damages, according to Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman.

Cory J. Campbell, 18; Scott M. Emery, 20; Amos T. Fox, 19 and Jerod J. Heath, 19, all of Bethel have been charged with criminal mischief in connection with the incident, Bellman said.

When the police investigation pointed to the four men, Bellman called them into the police office, read them their rights and questioned them about the damage at Gould, he said.

All four confessed to doing the damage, the chief said.

"All four subjects were asked why they did the damages," Bellman's police report reads, "and they all stated they had nothing better to do."

One field hockey goal and its netting was damaged beyond repair, Bellman said. The damage amounts to $1,414, because Gould Academy officials say the hockey cages must be bought in pairs, the chief said.

The four men are scheduled to appear on Nov. 12 in Rumford District Court on the criminal mischief charges, Bellman said. "If convicted, the request of restitution from each will be $353.50," he said.

Juvenile smokers warned; young Tarzan stopped from swinging

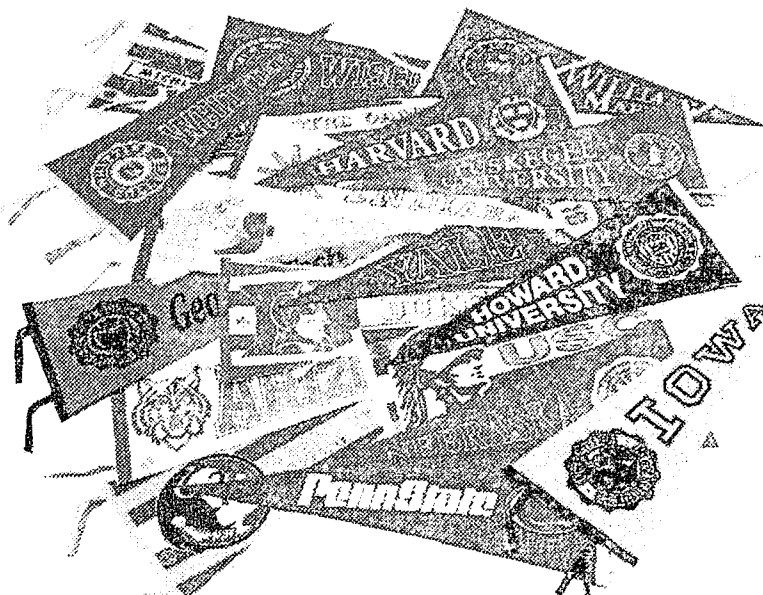

Friday police warned juveniles to stop smoking near the Ethel Bisbee School, according to police reports. The group of juveniles smoking near the former elementary school included two Gould Academy students, whose names were turned over to Gould officials. The juveniles were warned that further complaints at the site could lead to criminal trespass charges.

Saturday night at 8:30 p.m. police received a complaint of juveniles creating a traffic hazard by swinging across Paradise Road. Police found no one in the area. The same complaint came in again about two hours later. On the second check, police saw a juvenile on a rope and two other juveniles nearby. The three boys were asked to remove the rope.

In other police news last week, Bethel Auto Sales reported the theft of a pickup truck tail-light valued at approximately $100.

Halloween night, police responded to a report of a group of juveniles throwing things at pedestrians on Church Street. Police talked to a group of five juveniles who were warned to stop throwing objects or face criminal mischief or disorderly conduct charges.

Teachers to attend conference

By NATALIE TIMBERLAKE

The fourth annual Northeast Reading Recovery Conference, which gets underway in Portland, Wednesday, Nov. 3, will have several SAD44 personnel involved.

The conferences are held regionally and nationally each year to meet the requirements of reinforcing and extending the training of Reading Recovery teachers and teacher leaders. They also feature workshops for all teachers, as well as for other administrators, parents, and board members.

Melanie Ellsworth, teacher leader, and Natalie Timberlake, local teacher training site coordinator, are part of the central planning committee in cooperation with representatives from the other conference sponsors: Maine Department of Education, Division of Compensatory Education; Reading Recovery Center, University of Maine; Maine Reading Association, and the other teacher training sites in Maine.

Barbara Watson, of Auckland, New Zealand is the featured keynote for the conference when the general assembly opens at 8:30 a.m., Thursday, at the Holiday Inn by the Bay. Sessions open to general audiences as well as the closed training workshops will go on through Thursday and Friday. There will be additional special sessions for teacher leaders with Barbara Watson on Wednesday and Saturday.

Ellsworth, who is teacher leader for Reading Recovery teachers and teachers-in-training in SAD44, SAD61, SAD17, SAD43, SAD21 and SAD9 will be a presenter on Friday with the topic "Self-Monitoring." David Murphy, CPS principal, Timberlake, and former superintendent, Dewaine B. Craig, will be panelists on topics of interest to general conference-goers who are now, or anticipate being, implementers of Reading Recovery. They will speak from their own experiences in bringing Reading Recovery to this area as the fourth site in Maine.

Sarah Coolidge, president; Daniel Hart, adviser; with 14 members of the Telstar National Honor Society, and volunteer Caroline Gould, CPS teacher, assisted in collating portfolios for the conference. Thirteen hundred delegates from the Northeast Region (Newfoundland to Pennsylvania) have registered for this event in Portland.

NOVA

Director proposes summer courses for academics and enrichment

By RICH PLANTE

A proposed NOVA academic and enrichment summer program would provide courses such as applied math and building trades for both adults and students, according to Northern Oxford Vocational Area Director Dewaine Craig.

Speaking at a recent NOVA cooperative board meeting, Craig said the program could be part of a study on year-round school being suggested by the state, provide enrichment and academic courses in place of remediation, and help improve the image of NOVA.

Craig said NOVA is known as a vocational institution, but it can provide academic courses as well. He said students going to college might take a summer vocational course and vocational students could use the NOVA summer program, called NOVA Term Three, to take pressure off a regular semester. "Maybe also a surprise might happen," said Craig. "Maybe we might have some ninth- to tenth-graders who want to try some exploratory things on the vocational side of the street. If they get an interest, they might want to come back for a junior or senior year in vocational education."

Craig asked the board members who serve on other school boards to bring back the idea of a summer school to their home school boards. Craig said he would like to have a complete program available by February vacation so he could get the program out to the students and adults who would benefit from a vocational and academic program.

Craig said the possible courses are graphic arts, video productions, auto mechanics, welding, hospitality, business, building trades, metal trades, forestry, leadership/administration, applied communications, economic based U.S. history, computer aided drafting, Spanish, computers, environmental science, applied physics, and applied math. The courses could run from 8 in the morning to 8 p.m. with different modules.

Other business

The board hired Karen Perry-Thames of Rumford as NOVA secretary. Perry-Thames has an A.S. degree in computer applications from Thomas College.

The board also approved the second reading of the NOVA cooperative agreement and constitution, and approved the second reading of the drug-free workplace policy and the first reading of the section b bylaws for the NOVA board.

I'm writing this before Halloween, and there have been lots of activities getting ready for the big party, and there have been related activities going on in the classrooms. Each room is responsible for some art work to be used for decorating the gym. The kindergarten class is creating a "mini math play" using the theme of Halloween. They are publishing their first book and are learning all about the letters A and B.

The first-graders are writing stories about trees. Their favorite fall books are "Nuts to You" and "The Raggedy Red Squirrel." The new letter sounds are th, represented by the angry goose, and r, the roaring lion. They are all enjoying their new learning stations: mirrors, signs of fall, shadows, listening story, painting, and big books.

The second-graders have planted rye grass to learn about erosion and how grass affects erosion. They will also be finding out what we can do to help prevent this problem. They've done lots of writing in their journals. They are working with graphs and tables in math.

The "Scarecrow Show" in the third grade was held this past Friday. Each class toured the room and were introduced to all these characters. The children have been reading and writing scary stories. Mr. Burke has invited fifth-graders to visit his room from time to time to share their writings with the third grade. This is a fun activity for both the older and younger students, and both learn from each other.

The fourth-graders are finishing up "Charlotte's Web" and will be comparing the book to the movie. They are working with fractions in math. They are learning the "Sixteen Counties" song in their Maine studies lessons. They, too, are working on Halloween decorations and had a mini party of their own during Friday's activity period.

My fifth-graders have completed their paper-mache globes and they are hanging from the ceiling. Our pen pal letters are on their way to Mrs. Deegan's fifth grade at the Rowe School. We are finishing up our reading unit of folktales. Our final story was a Cheyenne Indian story. Mrs. Emerson brought in some special clay and her toaster oven and we made beads for an Indian-style necklace. Aaron brought in a pair of his mother's porcupine quill earrings to show, as the story had featured using the porcupine quills. We are getting close and closer to identifying our mystery powders in science. Our bottle drive was a tremendous success. Many thanks to those who worked and to those who donated. mar, DOM, for daily oral math, DOG, for a daily lesson in geography, and DOA for daily oral analogy. Math work sheets should be coming home nightly for homework. No calculators allowed on this one! Lots of work was due this past week, creative writing, book report project and ancient civilizations project. Ranks close on Nov. 3.

We are sending special thanks to Mike Smith for donating his time to make us a public sign to announce all the important events going on at our school. We are using it already!

For those who have been wishing that school pictures could be taken yearly, instead of every other year, the parent volunteers have decided to organize the project this year. School pictures will be taken on Tuesday, Nov. 16. Informational material should be coming home soon.

Gymnastics began on Wednesday, Oct. 27, and are being held in our gym from 3 to 5 p.m. for boys and girls in grades k-6. Tumbling, vaulting and balance beam skills are being taught. It is never too late to join. Call the YMCA at 743-7184 for more information.

Please make note of the date of Wednesday, Nov. 10. Superintendent McCalmon will be leading a community visioning night. All parents and community members of West Paris are invited and encouraged to come. What do we want for our children and our community as we approach the year 2000? WILDERNESS MEDICAL COURSE OFFERED Hurricane Island Outward Bound will sponsor an intensive back-country medical training course in Newry from Jan. 5 to 13, 1994.

This 64-hour, hands-on Wilderness First Responder course will show students how to deal with medical emergencies when they are miles from help and dialing 911 is not an option. This class has no prerequisite and is open to the public.

Wilderness medicine differs from traditional first aid in three respects.

First, transport times are measured in hours and days rather than minutes, so many phases of patient care that usually occur in a hospital must be carried out in the field. Second, severe environments dramatically increase the complexity of any emergency and heighten risks to patients and rescuers alike. Third, limited equipment makes improvisation and resourcefulness essential.

These issues and more will be addressed by professional instructors from Wilderness Medical Associates, of Bryant Pond. In eight days, instructors will take students from ground-zero to medically competent in the field, whether the field is a national park or the high seas.

Classes are fast-paced with an emphasis on practical skills. Mornings are devoted to lectures, while afternoons and evenings are spent outside working on everything from litter construction to full-scale rescue simulations. At least three realistic simulations, complete with fake wounds and stage blood, will be conducted. All simulations will be videotaped and debriefed for enhanced learning. Past students commonly report of real-life rescues that, "It felt just like a simulation."

This course is recommended for all outdoor professionals and others who spend time in remote areas. Graduates will be nationally certified by Wilderness Medical Associates. For further information: 800-742-2931.

AHA's HeartFest Shows Shopping Smart Can Help Your Heart

Take this test. It affects something more important than your IQ — your heart. How often do you:

- Eat fried foods or deep fried foods (including French fries)?
- Eat high-fat cheeses such as cheddar or Monterey Jack?
- Use regular salad dressing or mayonnaise?
- Eat pastries such as croissants, doughnuts, sweet rolls or pies?
- Eat regular hamburger meat (in casseroles or on a bun)?
- Eat more than 3-4 eggs per week (including those used in cooking)?

If you answered "often" to any of these questions, you may need to cut fat from your diet. The American Heart Association can help you.

From October 11-17, during HeartFest, its annual nutritional awareness event held at more than 6,000 grocery stores nationwide, the AHA will distribute its "How To Shop Smart To Help Your Heart" brochure. The brochure includes nine steps to reduce fat as well as coupons for sponsors, low fat food products.

You can cut fat from your diet in many ways. For example, bake or broil instead of frying. Switch from fatty to lean cuts of meat. Eat low fat or nonfat frozen yogurt instead of ice cream. You can also use low fat or nonfat salad dressings, mayonnaise, breads, cereals, pastas, cheese and dairy products. Eat bagels instead of biscuits. And egg whites or egg substitutes are better than whole eggs.

If you follow these tips, you will likely reduce your intake of total fat, saturated fats and cholesterol. And that can help lower your blood cholesterol, which at a high level is a major risk factor for developing heart disease.

The AHA suggests you limit total fat intake to less than 30 percent of the calories you eat each day. Your saturated fat intake should be less than 10 percent of total calories. And limit cholesterol intake to no more than 300 milligrams and sodium to no more than 3,000 milligrams a day.

By participating in HeartFest, formerly called Food Festival, you can learn how to read the new food label that the Food and Drug Administration will require of food manufacturers. It's a lot easier to understand — and will help you plan a low fat menu. You can also take a self-administered test by watching "A Healthy Challenge — The National Nutrition Test." It's a one hour program set to appear on Lifetime Cable Network during the week of October 17.

For more information on HeartFest or reducing fat in your diet, contact your local American Heart Association or call 1-800-AHA-1-SAVE (1-800-242-8721).

When I stand and look at the mountains I think how exceedingly new our country is. How can I describe the inexpressible tenderness and immortal life of the grim forest? There I find where the moss grows and decaying trees are not really old, but they seem to enjoy a perpetual youth with tinkling, lispings birds and trickling rills.

I have only to travel a day into the interior of an old forest to come to the very America which Cabot, Smith or Raleigh visited. The Alagash is a good example. Years ago

I visited there several times to go fishing with my husband.

I remember the brilliant white stems of the canoe-birches and how they mingled with the other trees around them.

The red squirrels intrigued me. Their spruce voices were like the working of sap through some crack in the tree. They were impatient little beasts and would occasionally try to alarm the forest about me. If I talked to any of them they would withdraw by an aerial turnpike into a more distant cedar top and spring a rattle again.

The land was an immeasurable forest for the sun to shine upon. It did not look as if a solitary traveler had cut so much as a walking stick there. Yet, there were camps and bridges.

The lake looked like a gleaming silver platter at the end of a table.

My journeys there were a long time ago but I think a trip there today would be just as lovely.

John Betts took his usual trail walk this week, which he had not been able to do since before surgery. His two dogs and cat were very pleased to go again. John wishes to say "Thank you" to all who sent him cards when he was in the Maine Medical Center.

Robert Holt and daughter Jennett of Windsor were at the farm on Saturday, and they visited me in late afternoon.

On Wednesday, I went with several teachers to Gray to visit Doris Hayes. When she lived here she was a member of our T.T. Group and we still miss her.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Inman visited me Tuesday evening.

Friday evening, I went to the Variety Show at West Paris.

My sister-in-law was lucky to get four tickets to the World Series Game in Philadelphia. On Tuesday night she took her 14-year-old grandson. On Wednesday night brother Vaughn and Herbie attended the game.

The foliage had just peaked the further south we went.

Out-of-staters complain of slow-downs due to construction on Maine highways. Out of Waterbury, Conn., we were an hour and twenty minutes going nine miles due to four lanes of traffic narrowing to one at a narrow bridge due to construction. Otherwise, we visited historic Fort Independence Gap National Cemetery and training sites for National Guard and Reserves. Colonial Williamsburg. The William and Mary College, one of the oldest in this country was celebrating its 300th anniversary with notable and outstanding parade ending with the beautiful Budweiser horses and wagon.

Recent Sunday supper guests of Bill and Phyllis Bancroft were Mr. and Mrs. John Blackwell and friends of Huntsville, S.C., and her mother, Mrs. Agnes Lahd of Waterford.

Bill and Phyllis were in Lewiston Monday. Weather forecasters are becoming more accurate—but they are still several hours behind arthritis.

Everett and Althea Sawyer of Fryeburg celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary at a party at the home of Darlene and Gregory Dunn, hosted by Darlene and Gregory. Lynne Andrews, Wayne and Elaine, and Eleanor Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer and the parents of Loretta Andrews, about 15 people were there to help them celebrate this happy occasion.

Several fellows from Ripley & Fitchburg in South Paris went to Wilson Mills to Albert Nelson's camp and climbed out a trail from the Parham Pond to the lake. On Saturday evening, Bob and Geneva Tripp and Walter and Carolyn Heino joined Albert and Eleanor at their camp for a nice visit, and they all had supper together. There is a lot of logging going on up there on "our" road, so we wonder how the snowmobiling will be. Burton Hall is the logger doing the work.

Glady Kilgore went to Fryeburg with Eleanor Nelson on Wednesday to see her eye doctor.

Several members of Minchaha Temple of the Pythian Sisters from Stoneham met last Saturday at the home of Lucy Brown. Eight members enjoyed the breakfast meeting with Violet Doughty. Evelyn Bean of Bryant Pond was also there.

Carolyn Heino and Geneva Tripp treated Grace Nelson to a birthday dinner in Turner on Sunday.

Frances Grant and Eleanor Nelson took a ride to Rumford one day last week and stopped in to Flowers Etc. This is a florist shop owned by Charles Nelson of East Stoneham. She was very busy with lots of orders, and of course we came away with some pretty plants.

In the news last week regarding the five categories of cakes, winners of the "Fellers Cake Bake" we left out some names for which I apologize. Here are the corrections: Yummyest Looking was Zachary Drew; Best Cub Scout Theme, Jimmy Golin; Best Holiday Theme, Danny Chandler; Judges Choice, Chris Mason; and Best Tasting, Ryan Crowell.

On Tuesday night of this week the firemen held their monthly meeting at the Stoneham Fire Station with about 15 people attending. They were all pleased to look over the new fire truck which was a gift to the town. Much business was discussed and taken care of. It was voted to have a booster club a little later. They also voted to give the old Ford fire truck to the Newry Fire Dept.

ASK A LAWYER

My neighbors and I own nearly all the land bordering a small (six to seven acre) pond that was created several decades ago by the damming of a small stream to build a public road. The only other land bordering the pond is the public road itself, and people are using that for access to the pond for recreational activities. Do my neighbors and I own the pond? Do we have the right to restrict public use of the pond by posting no trespassing signs?

It looks like you and your neighbors are the proud owners of a private pond. And with the ownership comes the right to keep other people off.

All of this would be different if your little pond were much bigger. In Maine, all ponds containing more than 10 acres have the legal status of "great ponds," and the state owns them and the soil under them in trust for the public. Generally the public has a right to fish, "fowl" (that is, hunt birds) and cut ice on the great ponds.

Those public rights trace back to an ancient law called the Colonial Ordinance of 1641--the same ordinance which provides the public with the rights of fishing, fowling and navigation (but not sunbathing and Frisbee-throwing) between the low-tide line and the high-tide line along the coast. This is a rule we Mainers inherited from our forebears in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Luckily for you and your neighbors (not so fortunately for members of the public who have been using the pond), those Colonials picked 10 acres as the cut-off point. Your pond is therefore not a "great pond," and the public doesn't have any legal right to come into it if the pond's owners object.

Who are the pond's owners? From what you have described, it sounds like each neighbor continues to own what he or she owned before the road construction created the pond. Abutters to a stream usually own to the center of the channel. When an artificial pond results from FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS--Brandy Cordwell (left) and Wesley Richardson and other Telstar High School Future Business Leaders of America club members sold over 2,000 "ghost" lollipops last week. The group is raising money so some members can attend the national FBLA convention, Nov. 18-21, in Rhode Island. The group must raise $2,500 to send nine members to the conference.

damming up the stream, the land ownership isn't changed. (The rule is different for natural lakes or ponds, where the law assumes that the natural boundary of the waterbody is also the boundary of the private land). Since your pond is artificial, you can draw imaginary lot lines on the surface of the water which look exactly like the old lot lines before the flood.

All this brings us to the question of how you keep the public off. The road adjacent to the water doesn't give the public any right to come onto the water; the public's rights end at the boundary of the town right-of-way. By the same token, your rights are limited by the existence of the public road. You don't have any right to place a sign in the public right-of-way without the town's permission. So you may have to sink a long signpost into the water right along the edge of the public way in order to post your "keep off" sign. Once you do so, uninvited users become trespassers, subject to both civil and criminal penalties for trespassing.

Alliance promotes micro-business lending programs

The Western Mountains Alliance will be working with groups throughout Maine to help distribute loans and give technical assistance to small businesses.

The alliance has met with people who administer micro-business financial lending and technical assistance, and as a result will provide assistance to small businesses in Oxford, Franklin, Somerset and Piscataquis counties.

Co-chairs of the alliance's Micro-Business Committee, Don Poisson of Farmington and Gardiner Young of Kingfield, will be working with representatives from Coastal Enterprises, Inc. (CEI), SCORE, Displaced Homemakers, Community Concepts and Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments (AVCOG).

Western Mountains Alliance also hopes to meet with micro-business lenders soon from the Women's Business Development Corporation, an organization that provides loans specifically to women-owned businesses.

The alliance will be serving as an information and referral resource for western Maine businesses. People will be able to call to get information on the types of loans or technical assistance available. Callers will be referred by Western Mountains Alliance to the appropriate organization.

"There are so many opportunities out there for small businesses in western Maine to receive financial and hands-on help," Don Poisson said. "Often, people just don't know where to look to get that help they need."

"The alliance will become their first 'pit-stop,' guiding them to the exact people they should be talking to," Poisson said.

In addition to financial help, people will be able to receive technical assistance in writing business plans, cash flow statements, or developing a strategic marketing plan, Poisson said.

"Many small businesses actually find that type of assistance more helpful than actual loans of capital," he said.

The typical micro-business loan averages anywhere between $600 up to loans of $15,000 to businesses with less than 20 employees.

Western Mountains Alliance's long-term goal is to become a micro-business lender itself when the economic growth and demand in western Maine warrants it.

"There are plenty of programs already in place to help small businesses. We don't have to reinvent the wheel," Poisson said. "We want to begin working with these programs and help employers in western Maine right now--today."

Western Mountains Alliance has already received two calls from western Maine businesses. People wanting information may call Edie Smith at 778-7274, or write to her at Western Mountains Alliance, P.O. Box 29, Farmington, ME 04938.

LIVING WILLS INFORMATION

Recognizing that people in Western Maine may have questions regarding living wills, Stephens Memorial Hospital will offer informational sessions on Advance Directives.

Two separate sessions, Nov. 4 and 18, will be held in order to answer any question on living wills and healthcare powers of attorney.

Throughout Maine and all over the country, countless individuals have chosen to provide their physicians and families with written instructions on what to do in the event that they become seriously ill or injured, and are unable to communicate. These instructions are called advance directives, living wills and healthcare powers of attorney.

At each information gathering, basic questions regarding living wills may be answered and a video tape about advance directives will be shown. The public will have an opportunity to take home a packet which includes additional information and forms which may be used by those who choose to sign a Living Will. These packets are also available at the Reception/Information Desk at Stephens Memorial Hospital and may be picked up at any time during the year.

The sessions will be held on Thursday, Nov. 4 and 18, at 7 p.m. in the Stephens Memorial Hospital board room, located on the lower level of the building. The public is invited to attend this free informational gathering. Due to space limitations, seating is by reservation only. Seats may be reserved by calling the Community Relations Department at Stephens Memorial Hospital at 743-5933, Ext. 473.

New deer hunt laws

Maine deer hunters should be mindful of several new laws affecting them, according to the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife.

One new law enacted by the 1993 session of the Maine legislature and affecting all hunters concerns hunting on paved roads. It is now unlawful to hunt or to possess a loaded firearm within 10 feet of the edge of the pavement on a paved road or within the right-of-way of any controlled-access highway. It is also unlawful to discharge a firearm across a paved road.

A change in the deer baiting law makes it illegal during any open season on deer to: (1) place salt or other bait or food in a place to entice deer; or (2) hunt from an observation stand or blind overlooking salt, grain, fruit, nuts or other foods known to be attractive to deer.

This new law does not apply to hunting from an observation stand or blind overlooking standing crops, foods left as the result of agricultural operations or as the result of natural occurrence; nor does it apply to bear bait that has been placed at a properly identified bear hunting stand or blind. It does make it legal to place food for deer at any time except during a deer hunting season.

Another new law allows anyone without a hunting license who takes a deer on their own land to move the deer or transport it to a registration station provided they first securely attach to it a tag bearing their name and address. This was previously allowed by Warden Service policy but was not addressed in the law.

The legislature has also passed a law stating that gift deer or moose, or parts thereof, need now be labeled only with the registration seal number and the name and address of the person who registered the animal.

And for hunters who participate in the special muzzleloading firearm season on deer, the legislature has made it legal to use muzzleloading handguns and telescopic sights, and they reduced the minimum age limit for participation from 14 to 10.

Of interest to those who would violate Maine's hunting laws, the legislature has added a number of offenses to those that require hunting license revocation, from one year up to 10 years depending on the nature of the violation. Conviction on a night hunting charge, for example, requires a one-year license revocation in addition to any other penalties. Shooting a domestic animal while hunting draws a five-year suspension, while anyone convicted of causing a "mistaken identity" type hunting accident causing injury or death of another person will be forbidden from holding a hunting license for 10 years.

C Surplus hunter attacked and stomped by injured, enraged moose

By JOHN VINCENT

A Frye man said he thought he was going to die while hunting in C Surplus Township Saturday, when an injured moose attacked him from behind, rearing up on its hind legs and stomping on him a dozen times as he lay in a ditch.

The moose had apparently been shot illegally during bird-hunting season and had been suffering ever since, according to wardens who examined the carcass after the attack.

"The moose was trying to kill me. It stood up on two legs and tried to come down on top of me. I was in a ditch and I was holding my gun but I couldn't get it loaded," said Rosaire Chartier, 55, of Frye village, describing the harrowing attack. The moose bent the rifle, he said, but he was able to get it to fire after the third try and bring the bull down.

"That was terrifying. I thought I was going to die," Chartier said.

"I cut my left thumb, broke my middle finger and my legs are pretty beat up. I'm lucky to be alive, I tell you. He must have tried to stomp on me at least a dozen times, and the last time he didn't miss, he got my chest and my leg," Chartier said, noting that the moose didn't make a sound.

Chartier, a woodsman, drove about 20 miles from his home at about 6 a.m. Saturday to get to a tree stand he had set up in C Surplus Township between Andover and Upton. He said he had been working there for Nichols Bros.

Logging of Mexico.

"The attack happened when I was walking down the skidder trail. It was dark and the first thing I know, something is attacking me and the moose is hitting me with its head and foot. The moose had come up behind me," Chartier said.

"I fell down in the brush and the moose put its feet on top of me, its front foot, its back leg, it was a real wild animal. It took me about 10 minutes to get my gun loaded. It was very, very scary," Chartier said.

"Every time I tried to make a move, he was right on top of me, so many things went through my mind. That moose tried to kill me, but every time he came down with his front legs, I turned," Chartier said, explaining that the worst impact of the moose's blows glanced off him and hit the ground.

"I had my gun the whole time but I couldn't load it up. He was beating on me so bad, I couldn't load up," Chartier said, adding that the moose bent his gun and when he finally got it loaded, the first two shots did not fire.

Finally Chartier's 30-06 rifle fired.

"The bullet went into its belly. It turned away and fell down. I didn't look back. I kept going. Believe me, that was terrifying. I thought I was going to die."

"He was angry, oh, very very wild, very very wild. I tell you, when I got to my truck, I was very happy," Chartier said.

Chartier drove 10 miles to his son's house where he called a game warden, then he drove himself to Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway where he was treated and released.

His son stayed behind to lead the game warden to the spot where the moose was, which was only 50 yards from the tree stand his father had been walking towards.

"I was kind of shaky, but I drove," Chartier said.

Game Warden Donald Gray of Newry said Warden Rick Mills of Andover found the moose dead in the woods.

"The moose had lost part of his antlers and had been shot some time before that. It has a festering wound in the chest area. Obviously, the moose was in bad shape. It had lost a lot of weight," Gray said, adding it was down to about 400 pounds from its normal 500 to 600.

The meat was no good, so Chartier did not even get that out of the incident, Gray said it was not determined if the moose had been shot with a rifle or a shotgun, but it had happened some time in October, probably during bird-hunting season and the moose must have been suffering badly for some time.

"It was left in the woods for coyotes and bear to feed on. It smelled bad, and the blood was pooled up--it wasn't any good," Gray said.

Chartier said he's going out deer

LEGION CHRISTMAS LIGHTS

The American Legion Auxiliary of Post #68 has made plans to raise funds by selling Christmas tree lights in honor of or in memory of American service men and women.

The funds raised will go to purchase Christmas presents for veterans at Ledgeview Memorial Home, West Paris; and in the future, for those at the Maine State Veteran's Home in South Paris.

Two Colorado spruce trees were purchased by the auxiliary last May and planted in honor of Past Department President Fannie Cummings and in memory of Past Department President Rena Howe. A dedication ceremony was held on Memorial Day.

The trees will be decorated with a white star on the tops with red and blue lights below. Lights may be purchased for $2 each from any auxiliary member or by contacting co-chairpersons Eleanora Davis or Martha Stowell at 824-3785 or 875-2475.

JOBS BILL TO AID NEW VETS

Recent veterans whose military skills don't readily transfer to civilian jobs may now get help from a new federal training program that will pay certain costs to participating private employers. The Service Members Occupational Conversion and Training Act (SMOCTA) is aimed at veterans discharged after Aug. 1, 1990, who have had difficulty getting steady work. Jointly implemented by the Departments of Defense, Labor and Veterans Affairs, the program will pay wage reimbursements up to $10,000 to employers who establish approved training and offer prospects of long-term employment. Reimbursement of up to $12,000 is available for training certain disabled veterans. This program not only provides jobs for veterans, but it also provides an excellent opportunity for employers, including small businesses, to add employees to their workforce and get help in offsetting training costs at the same time. VA will perform program administration activities along with the Department of Labor. VA will also provide educational, vocational and readjustment counseling to qualified veterans who are interested in these services. The Department of Defense is funding $75 million earmarked for employers who provide jobs to qualified veterans. To qualify, a veteran must have been honorably discharged from active military service after Aug. 1, 1990, and served for more than 90 days, unless discharged earlier because of a service-connected disability. Eligibility is then based on either the Defense Department's determination that the veteran's primary or secondary military occupation specialty is not readily transferable to the civilian workforce, or the veteran is unemployed at the time of application and for at least eight of the 15 weeks immediately preceding application. Eligibility also is extended to veterans discharged after Aug. 1, 1990 who have a VA service-connected disability rating of 30 percent or more. Employers can apply to participate in SMOCTA by contacting the nearest Maine job service office for details, applications and assistance in establishing approved training programs. Veterans also may contact their nearest Maine job service office for assistance, or call their nearest VA Regional Office toll free at 800-827-1000.

VETERANS' DAY PARADE PLANNED FOR LOCKE MILLS

The Jackson-Silver American Legion Post in Locke Mills is asking veterans of all branches of the U.S. armed forces, whether members of a veterans' organization or not, to march in the Veteran's Day parade on Nov. 11.

The post is also in need of at least one drummer to keep cadence for the marchers.

The parade will form at the Legion post at 9 a.m. and step off at 9:30 p.m.

Boy, girl and cub scouts have already signed up to march. Any other interested school, community or business group is invited to participate.

Paraders will march from the post to the Greenwood war memorial. A brief service will be held at the memorial including a prayer, the playing of taps and the placement of a memorial wreath.

Following the outdoor service paraders will march to the post and a service will be held inside the Legion hall. Harry Faulkner will be one of the featured speakers.

For more information contact Earl Tyler at 824-3785.

BETHEL SENIOR CITIZENS

Lindley Wieden announced at the October meeting that plans were being made for the Christmas Party at the Madison in Rumford on Dec. 8, 5:30 or 6:30 p.m., and car-pooling to be arranged.

Thirty-three pairs of mittens are due Dec. 1 and money was donated to the Rotary Fund for children.

The committee for Retirement Living will be working on a survey, and hopefully with the support of interested groups and citizens the area will eventually see a retirement home.

The Hometown Bakery donated a lovely Halloween cake which was enjoyed along with the great New England harvest dinner put on by Pleasant Valley Grange, West Bethel.

Dr. Kenneth Hamilton inspired the group with an explanation of HOPE, an alternative way to keep well and healthy.

Fifty people enjoyed a foliage trip through the White Mountains, with lunch at Lincoln. The Bear Show at Clark's Trading Post and watching two moose in Randolph were added attractions.

The next meeting will be Nov. 10, 11 a.m., at the Masonic Hall in Bethel. Dinner will be put on by the Eastern Star. Price of dinner, $5. The speaker will be Arlene Greenleaf. A raffle will be held.

PUBLIC INVITED TO GOULD ACADEMY BLOOD DRIVE

The public is invited to donate blood at an American Red Cross blood drive sponsored by Gould Academy Students on Tuesday, Nov. 16, from noon to 5 p.m. in the Bingham Gym on Church Street.

Donors should be in good health, at least 18 years old (17 with a signed American Red Cross parental/guardian consent form), weigh in at least 105 pounds, and have no history of hepatitis or exposure to the AIDS virus. Blood may be given every eight weeks.

To make an appointment to donate at the Gould Academy blood drive, please call Nurse Donovan at the infirmary, 824-2161.

Jackson-Silver Auxiliary

The generosity of businesses in Bethel, Locke Mills and Bryant Pond helped to make the Oct. 24 card party held by the Jackson-Silver Post Auxiliary, American Legion, such a success that players were hoping for another one soon. At the same time, $222 was raised for Special Olympics. Gifts and gift certificates were donated as door prizes by the following: Red Top Truck Stop, Sunday River Brewing Co., Rhea Lu's Chinese Restaurant, Western Maine Supply, Fashion Basket, Telstar Video, Maine Street Beauty Shop, Keenan's, Bob's Corner Store, Lakeside Family Restaurant, Mt. Mica Rarities, Locke Mills Shurline, Preb's Pharmacy, Brooks Bros., Carmela's, Lowell's Saw Shop, True North, The Frame Shop, The Big Apple, Wild Rose, Mt. Mann, Bethel IGA, The Village Store, Breau's Too, The Frozen Logger, Larry's Garage and Mollyockett Antiques.

Kathleen McAllister, Sally Smith and Leah Deegan also contributed door prizes. Raffle tickets on the afghan, which the Unit won at Fall Conference, were sold and the winner drawn at the card party. Annie Barker of Peru won the quilt.

Mary Lyon, who has chaired the committee for this now annual card party wishes to thank the businesses which so generously donated their resources; Jackie Libby and Kathleen McAllister who did the leg work in soliciting these prizes; the individuals who donated prizes; those who baked pies; and, most important, those who came and played cards and games, for without them there would be no party.

HAPPY HALLOWEEN HACKERS—Junior girl scouts from Troop 370 dig into their Jack-o'-lanterns Saturday at Carter's Cross Country Ski Center. Other activities on the busy day were hiking and picnicking on the ski trails, cake baking, belt weaving and a birthday party in honor of Juliette Low, founder of Girl Scouting in the United States. Troop members taking part in the activities were Emily Carter, Michelle Chouinard, Jessica McElravy, Ashley Colby, Kelly Moorman, Blair Roberts, Geneva Robinson, Melissa Abbott, Sarah Smith, Crystal Seidel, Cheray Johnson and Cassie Bennett. Troop leaders were Harriet Robinson and Lynn Moorman, and Anne Carter helped chaperone.

Andover Selectmen grant rebates

By ROBERT BOURASSA

Andover selectmen granted a tax rebate last week and agreed to rent a dumpster for the town's landfill.

The board corrected a paperwork error which resulted in overcharges on the property taxes for Robert Akers and approved rebates to Akers in the amounts of $41.49 and $42.73 for 1992 and 1993 respectively.

The board also agreed to rent on a monthly basis a 30-yard dumpster with cover which will be placed at the town's dump site. Andover is among many Maine communities in the process of closing its landfill operation as mandated by the state and federal governments. The rental of the 30-yard container, which holds four to five tons of trash, will cost about $100 per month.

The board will also allow Road

Commissioner Wilbur Chenery to use his own discretion in setting hourly wage rates for temporary workers hired for winter road maintenance. The board approved a wage range of between $6 and $8 per hour depending on experience.

Selectman Chairman Wayne Delano read a written request from town constable George Cayer for a booster to increase the transmission and receiving power of his mobile police radio and for a rechargeable flashlight of professional quality. The board approved the purchase of the flashlight at an estimated cost of $100 and tentatively agreed to the radio equipment pending the receipt of a cost estimate.

Hours: Monday-Saturday 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Task Force notes:

The next meeting of the Bethel Area Task Force is scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 7, at the home of Janet Stowell on Paradise Road. Members are asked to bring a salad, casserole, or dessert for the potluck supper at 6 p.m.

During the business meeting, activities of on-going committees, including recreation, community retirement study, NTL relations, and community advocates, will be reviewed.

The Just Imagine Coffeehouse committee was recently recognized by the Bethel unit of the Western Maine Partnership on Alcoholism and Substance Abuse for its success in providing a smoke-free, alcohol-free recreational alternative in the area.

Jackson-Silver Post #68

The Post, along with its Auxiliary, met Thursday night, Oct. 21, at 6 p.m. to observe their annual Boy-Girl State Appreciation Supper. The three honored guests who went to Waterville last summer were: Christopher Howe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Howe; Joshua Fogg and Miss Tressa Curtis.

Other guests seated at the head table were: Mr. Philip Daye of Bethel, one of the few WWI veterans in the area; Mrs. Fannie Cummings, charter member of the Auxiliary (this marked the 50th year she has been at the recognition supper); Mr. John Howe, long-time member of the Post, past state commander and great-grandfather to Christopher Howe, one of the delegates; Mrs. Ruth Jucias, past president of State Auxiliary and presently assistant director of Girls' State (she was the main speaker for the occasion and outlined the activities of Girls' State); Tressa Curtis, Girls' State delegate; Mrs. Leah Deegan of the Post Auxiliary; Earl Tyler, Post commander; Jarrod Crockett, commander of Sons of the Legion; Brian Strickland, Post adjutant and commander of Oxford County American Legion; and Post National Vice Commander Vito DePhilip of Rumford who is an official of the Boys' State program.

It was voted by the Post to appoint a committee to revise present Post by-laws. Herbert Lyon, Donald Wallace and Andrew Bartlett were named to the committee.

It was voted to send flowers to Pam Dyke, wife of Post member Brandon Dyke. It was further voted to authorize the finance officer to pay all bills.

After some discussion it was voted that Andrew Bartlett would be responsible to see that the hall is cleaned thoroughly after each use.

It was further voted to purchase a cordless phone for the office, to grant Beth LaVallee use of the hall on Feb. 1, and to donate the use of the hall to Ruth Mason to be used for MS benefit, same as last year.

The next meeting will be held on Nov. 4.

Just Imagine Coffee House

The Just Imagine Coffeehouse presents its next evening of entertainment on Saturday, Nov. 6, 7 to 10 p.m., with the Castlebay folk group from Round Pond.

The coffeehouse is located at the West Parish Congregational Church, next to Gould Academy. Providing family fun in a smoke-free, alcohol-free environment, the Just Imagine Coffeehouse operates the first Saturday of each month. Homemade refreshments are available. A $3 donation ($1.50 for seniors and children) is asked at the door. An open mike welcomes local, walk-on talent. Watch for posters and newspaper articles announcing each month's event.

Castlebay performers on Saturday will be Julia Lane, an award-winning Celtic harpist, and Fred Gosbee, singer, song-writer, and player of the 12-string guitar, pennywhistle, recorder, and five-string viola. Music will include romantic love songs, raucous sea songs, and humorous ditties from the rugged Maine coast and the British Isles.

News from the The Bethel Library

Thanks to Linda Gamble for her donation of audio tapes—"For Love," Sue Miller; "Without Remorse," Tom Clancy; "November of the Heart," LaVyrle Spencer; "Lincoln," Philip B. Kunhardt, Jr.; and "JFK, Reckless Youth," Nigel Hamilton.

Thanks also to Peg Wight who purchased a birthday book, Gift of Changing Woman, in honor of her daughter Sara's birthday. Buying a birthday book is a special way to benefit the library and give a lasting gift in someone's name. There is a display of beautiful children's books at the library if you would like to select one, for a contribution of $10, to honor someone special. A bookplate will be put in the book, and a note will be sent to the birthday person.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words comfort and hope for your daily life.

In recent years the need of insurance has become more of a demand than ever before. The great increase in lawsuits has posed a great threat to one's savings and property.

Increase in replacement costs have greatly increased the need of more insurance.

The statement, "insurance poor" has now become a good definition of nearly all those that have adequate insurance. Good insurance is nearly a necessity, but adequate insurance is just about impossible for most.

However, insurance of this kind is not what I want to write of today. Years ago, when I was a small boy I used to think of the hymn, "Blessed Assurance," as "Blessed Insurance." I was quite embarrassed when I found out the difference, but actually, there was no great difference in the meaning. Perhaps it is more of assurance that I would refer to today.

Assurance does not have a price tag, but unfortunately it cannot protect us from losses that we can buy insurance to cover. On the other hand, insurance has no coverage to offer us the benefits that this assurance will give us. Even with this there are, like with insurance, many that are not adequately protected by assurance. The assurance that we speak of is that of our spiritual security.

The hymn which I previously spoke of starts with these words: "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine." Yes, when we accept Jesus Christ as our Savior, and remain in His care our spiritual security is indeed assured.

In biblical scripture's Jesus tells the pharisees and others of his purpose in St. John 10:10, "I am come that they (My sheep) might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." In St. John 3:16 Jesus speaking to Nicodemus and others says, for God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. In Isaiah 55 the Prophet foretells the gift of salvation that Christ will bring to the world. He uses the terms wine and milk to symbolically point out the spiritual food that Christ will offer. Isaiah 55:1--"Ho everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money come ye, buy and eat; Yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

The premium for Assurance? Your faith in God and His son, Jesus Christ.
